

President Gets Bill To Increase U.S. Income Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed and sent to President Johnson today the long-debated bill adding a 10 per cent surcharge to individual and corporation income taxes and ordering a $6 billion federal spending cut.

The Senate vote completed congressional action on the first federal income tax increase since 1951, at the time of the Korean war.

Johnson is expected to sign the bill into law promptly although he has said repeatedly he does not favor the spending restrictions in the legislation.

The Senate was told in the final debate on the compromise measure that it was a fiscal medicine necessary to prevent inflation leading to financial chaos.

Opponents contended that it would mean drastic reductions in spending on social programs and that the result would be cut-back in already inadequate efforts to help the nation's poor.

The House passed the measure Thursday night 268-150.

Its key provisions originally were adopted in the Senate 53-35 April 2 as an amendment to a House bill.

Johnson has said spending restrictions may force cutbacks in federal programs he considers already at rock-bottom levels.

The surcharge is retroactive for individuals to April 1 and for corporations to Jan. 1. It is scheduled to expire June 30 next year unless the new administration and Congress decide to extend it.

The increase, to go into effect 15 days after presidential approval, will apply to all individuals except those at the bottom of the scale—single persons with $1,000 or less of taxable income and couples with $2,000 or less.

The surcharge, along with other tax provisions in the bill, will bring in an estimated $15.5 billion in extra revenue to help improve the government's dismal fiscal picture in the next year.

The measure also includes a variety of other provisions retained by Senate-House conferees out of a wide-ranging series of riders tacked onto the legislation in the Senate.

The spending controls sections in the tax bill provides that the President must make cuts to reach the $6 billion total to the extent that Congress itself does not achieve this in acting on appropriations bills.

Another far-reaching provision in these sections sets a permanent ceiling on federal employment at the June, 1966, figure of 2,366,000.

The number of jobholders now is 244,000 above this figure. The bill requires that these 244,000 be eliminated by not filling one out of each four vacancies that occurs.

Another of these provisions requires a $10 billion reduction in appropriations for the upcoming fiscal year. This overlaps with the cuts made necessary by the $6-billion spending reduction.

The measure also directs the President to report to Congress next January as to how $8 billion of prior, unused appropriations, can be rescinded.

Other provisions in the bill: Extend until 1970 the present 10 per cent and 7 per cent respective rates on telephone and auto excise taxes, then provide for phasing them out so they would end in 1973.

Provide for a speedup in income tax payments by smaller corporations so that eventually (Continued on Page 2)

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. sources indicated today that misreading of radar signals may have caused erroneous reports of enemy helicopter sightings around the demilitarized zone and triggered mistaken American attacks on allied warships in the area.

The sources said it was "highly probable" that American planes and artillery fired last weekend on allied ships, which on radar scopes appeared to be low-flying helicopters. A U.S. patrol boat was sunk and an Australian destroyer got 200 holes from American missiles.

The U.S. Command had no further comment today. A spokesman said only that an investigation is still going on.

Derail Runaway Locomotive After 98-Mile Kansas Run

KINSLEY, Kan. (AP) — A maverick locomotive started by a mysterious malfunction took off without its engineer and careened 98 miles through the Kansas countryside Thursday, leading a Keystone Kops chase by deputies, police and spectators.

The two-unit diesel Santa Fe locomotive, which averaged a better than mile-a-minute clip during its 84-minute ride, was purposely derailed near Kinsley to end its unscheduled excursion.

During its run highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies and police raced against time as they tried to block crossings ahead of the wild runaway that sped through nine towns at speeds up to 90 miles an hour.

No one was hurt but there were several narrow escapes. Along the route officers had to contend with crowds of sightseers who flocked to the tracks for a glimpse of the speeding maverick.

The engine nearly hit a pedestrian and several automobiles at street crossings.

J. R. Fitzgerald, division superintendent, promised a thorough investigation.

It all began about 4 p.m. when the locomotive, freshly serviced and with its engine idling, quietly rolled off a roundhouse spur at Hutchinson onto the branch line that sweeps along the Arkansas River.

Apparently something went wrong with the "dead man's throttle"—designed to prevent the unit from moving unless a man's hand is applying pressure on the lever. Suddenly the train started moving.

Picking up speed on its way out of Hutchinson, the engine nearly hit one pedestrian and several automobiles at street crossings.

On the western edge of town, Harold Crain, a track supervisor from division headquarters at Newton, was operating a motorized handcar as he inspected the track.

Suddenly he looked up to see the locomotive charging at him. "I lifted one end of my car off the tracks, but I could see there wasn't time to finish it, so I just stepped back and waved it goodbye," Crain said.

He said smoke was boiling off the brakes "then the brakes burned out and the engine really took off." Sparks from the scorching brakes ignited grass fires for several miles outside Hutchinson.

Station agents were alerted over the railroad's voice network and Stanley Stout, the Sterling agent, started logging the times.

Santa Fe workers sent a chase engine in pursuit out of Larned, but the wild one had a five minute head start on the 26-mile run to the connection with the main line at Kinsley. They knew there wasn't time.

So the Newton dispatcher sent the order: "Derail it at the Y east of Kinsley."

Don Cargill, Kinsley agent, relayed the order to George Stone, section foreman, who threw the switch three-fourths of a mile from town.

"The switch headed it into the siding," Cargill said. "It was going so fast it couldn't make the curve. It rolled over on its side and tore up some track and knocked down some telephone poles."

State Funds Are Released

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The state Controlling Board released $455,000 Thursday toward construction of a $610,000 laboratory by Toledo Medical College next to the William Roche Memorial Hospital.

Another $184,245 was released to erect a Bureau of Employment Services office building in Zanesville.

Recent tornado damage at Gallipolis State Hospital and the new state penitentiary near Lucasville was estimated at $86,000 and the board released that sum for repairs.

Because the state has been unable to buy 100 acres to enlarge Pike Lake State Park, the Natural Resources Department obtained $19,500 from the board for appropriation proceedings. The park is within Pike State Forest.

Ashville Plans 4th Celebration

Plans are currently underway in Ashville for the village's annual 4th of July celebration.

The three-day event will commence 5 p.m. on Tuesday July 2, with a fish fry. At 7 p.m. that evening, the popular Little Miss and Mr. Parade and contest will be held. Prizes will be awarded to the contest winners and their two attendants.

Wednesday's events will be highlighted by the Bathing Beauty Parade and Contest for girls 16 years of age and older. The winner will be crowned Miss 4th of July and will be presented with a 21 jewel watch. A second and third place winner will also be selected in the contest and will receive cash prizes.

A big parade will open the final day's celebration at 11 a.m. on the 4th. Other scheduled attractions on that day are a band concert; garden tractor pull; entertainment by the Dog Patchers, a musical group; antique car parade and judging; Little League ball game; Metta Larks, vocal program; 2x4's; and the fireworks display at 11 p.m. which officially brings the affair to a close.

A MIDWAY of carnival and games will again be a daily feature of the three-day celebration.

Official entry blanks and rules for the contests and commercial float entries will be published in a future edition of The Herald.

Stiffer Gun Control Plans Under Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to put more muscle in a bill banning mail order sales of rifles and shotguns is under way in the Senate while in the House the same measure is headed for a possible midweek vote.

"Anything short of registration and licensing will not be effective," said Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D-Md., after the Senate Judiciary Committee Thursday, put off action on President Johnson's new bill for one week.

"Not a strong gun control measure," was the way Tydings described the bill which at the same time was being approved in the House Judiciary Committee.

Joining Tydings in the move for stricter action was Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., longtime foe of sterner weapons control. Both serve on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"A tremendous gap" in the bill, said Hruska, is its failure to restrict mail order sales within a state and not just across its borders.

He told a reporter he is consulting with Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., chief Senate sponsor of the bill, about inserting an amendment to require buyers to file affidavits of eligibility.

Under this procedure, dealers would have to hold up delivery for seven days to give police an opportunity to check on the affidavits.

Chief Justice Unavailable For Comment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Earl Warren is leaving the Supreme Court which he has headed during 15 years of controversy over the court's liberal decisions such as those on race discrimination and police powers, authoritative sources reported today.

White House officials declined to comment on today's report however, and all efforts to reach Warren were unsuccessful.

Warren said on his 75th birthday two years ago he thought there should be compulsory retirement for all public officials but did not specify at what age.

"I believe that the strength of our system in this country depends on the infusion of new blood into all our institutions," he explained then.

There is now no compulsory retirement for federal judges although they may step down at 70 after 10 years on the bench and receive a lifetime pension equal to their full salary. Warren's salary is $40,000 a year.

Usual procedure for a Supreme Court justice wishing to leave his post is to notify the president of his desires. It normally would be up to the president then to announce the retirement.

Columbus Man Suicide after Embezzlement

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A bachelor banker facing a warrant charging him with embezzlement of more than $100,000 apparently shot and killed himself along a busy highway near suburban Worthington.

The body of Royce Huegely, 38, manager of the Tremont-Fishinger branch here of the Ohio National Bank, was found by police and the FBI along Interstate 270 north of Worthington Thursday night.

Franklin County Coroner Robert Evans issued a ruling of apparent suicide.

Evans said Huegely died from two .22 caliber bullet wounds inflicted by a rifle found at the scene.

Huegely suffered a bullet wound in the chest and another under his chin, Evans reported.

Huegely, an 18-year employee of Ohio National, had left a note in the branch's night depository box admitting the embezzlement, police reported. The note, addressed to bank officials, was found early Wednesday morning.

Huegely had taken Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday off.

A station wagon spotted by a highway patrolman near Worthington early Wednesday turned out to be Huegely's, police said.

After tracking down its ownership through the license registration, police and the FBI went to the scene and found the body in weeds about eight feet off the highway.

A warrant had been issued by the FBI on Wednesday charging Huegely with embezzlement of more than $100,000 from the bank over a period of seven years, police reported.

The big Californian was named to the top post on the Supreme Court in 1953 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. At 77, he is known to have long felt it was time to step aside.

President Johnson, who expects to leave office himself when his term ends in January, will be able to name Warren's successor before he leaves. The appointment is of critical significance on a court where appointees commonly serve for decades and the relative strength of the liberal and conservative factions can be reversed by the departure of a single justice—depending on the politics of the president who chooses the man to fill the vacancy.

The Warren years on the court have been marked by unrelenting controversy. From the historic 1954 decision on school segregation up to the equally sweeping housing discrimination handed down just this past Monday, the court's actions have been headline-makers.

Ultraconservatives, while generally outraged at the court in general, have had special dislike for Warren. For years there have been "Impeach Earl Warren" billboards in sections where anticourt sentiment runs strong.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Earl Warren is leaving the Supreme Court which he has headed during 15 years of controversy over the court's liberal decisions such as those on race discrimination and police powers, authoritative sources reported today.

White House officials declined to comment on today's report however, and all efforts to reach Warren were unsuccessful.

Warren said on his 75th birthday two years ago he thought there should be compulsory retirement for all public officials but did not specify at what age.

"I believe that the strength of our system in this country depends on the infusion of new blood into all our institutions," he explained then.

There is now no compulsory retirement for federal judges although they may step down at 70 after 10 years on the bench and receive a lifetime pension equal to their full salary. Warren's salary is $40,000 a year.

Usual procedure for a Supreme Court justice wishing to leave his post is to notify the president of his desires. It normally would be up to the president then to announce the retirement.

The big Californian was named to the top post on the Supreme Court in 1953 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. At 77, he is known to have long felt it was time to step aside.

President Johnson, who expects to leave office himself when his term ends in January, will be able to name Warren's successor before he leaves. The appointment is of critical significance on a court where appointees commonly serve for decades and the relative strength of the liberal and conservative factions can be reversed by the departure of a single justice—depending on the politics of the president who chooses the man to fill the vacancy.

The Warren years on the court have been marked by unrelenting controversy. From the historic 1954 decision on school segregation up to the equally sweeping housing discrimination handed down just this past Monday, the court's actions have been headline-makers.

Ultraconservatives, while generally outraged at the court in general, have had special dislike for Warren. For years there have been "Impeach Earl Warren" billboards in sections where anticourt sentiment runs strong.

St. Lawrence Seaway Shut Down by Strikers

MONTREAL (AP)—Canadian workers of the St. Lawrence Seaway struck today to back up demands for a pay scale closer to that of U.S. employees of the waterway. The seaway was shut down tonight.

The locks at Sault Ste. Marie linking Lakes Superior and Huron and the Welland Canal between Lakes Ontario and Erie were closed on orders of the Seaway Authority. Earlier on Thursday the eastern section of the seaway between Montreal and Lake Ontario was closed to new traffic. Only ships already in the section were permitted to move.

During the night 16 ocean-going ships and 14 inland vessels were trying to get through to Montreal, while ocean-going and 8 inland vessels were trying to go up to Lake Ontario.

Above the Iroquois locks, at the eastern end of Lake Ontario, 58 ocean-going vessels were

St. Lawrence Seaway Shut Down by Strikers

MONTREAL (AP)—Canadian workers of the St. Lawrence Seaway struck today to back up demands for a pay scale closer to that of U.S. employees of the waterway. The seaway was shut down tight.

The last ship passing out of the seaway through the St. Lambert Locks at Montreal was the Canadian Cape Breton Miner out of Toronto.

"The government's inflexible stand and its failure to mediate in this dispute leaves us with no alternative but to exercise our legal and democratic right to withdraw our members' services," said William J. Smith, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers' Union, which represents the 1,200 Canadian seaway workers.

The locks at Sault Ste. Marie linking Lakes Superior and Huron and the Welland Canal between Lakes Ontario and Erie were closed on orders of the Seaway Authority. Earlier on Thursday the eastern section of the seaway between Montreal and Lake Ontario was closed to new traffic. Only ships already in the section were permitted to move.

During the night 16 ocean-going ships and 14 inland vessels were trying to get through to Montreal, while ocean-going and 8 inland vessels were trying to go up to Lake Ontario.

Above the Iroquois locks, at the eastern end of Lake Ontario, 58 ocean-going vessels were trapped for the duration of the strike.

Smith said the government's position had made further negotiation hopeless. The union had to abide by a vote of its members refusing the Seaway Authority's contract wage offer recommended by a federal conciliation board.

While the closedown shuts off Atlantic commerce from all Canadian and U.S. ports on the Great Lakes, shipping will continue between ports on individual lakes and between Lakes Michigan, Huron and Erie, which have river links.

But this type of trade is only a small fraction of the entire system.

The majority report of a Federal Conciliation Commission recommended two 6-per-cent wage increases over a two-year period, but the union wants two increases totaling 18 per cent. The union's original demand was for 20 per cent, but this was reduced during bargaining. The basic laborers' rate now is $2.77 an hour and the average hourly wage of the 1,200 workers is $3.10. The union says U.S. workers on the waterway earn 21 per cent more.

The prospect of a long strike plunged Great Lakes port officials into gloom.

Port directors from Detroit and Buffalo at a meeting in Toronto said a stoppage of two weeks or more would have a disastrous effect on the economy in their areas.

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Goldiggers" is a variety confection which is supposed to mind the NBC store for a few weeks while the owner of the hour, Dean Martin, has a vacation. It probably sounded like a better idea in the preshooting conference than it seemed in the premiere.

It is basically a combination of 1968 youth in the costumes of the depression thirties and singing the old songs with a modern beat.

That mixture, presumably would catch the whole audience — the kids because Joey Heatherton and Frank Sinatra Jr. are starring, and the older crowd because it will remind them of the good old days.

The result was a rather incongruous mish-mash of amusing musical moments, one of those inescapable spoofs of "Bonnie and Clyde," some production numbers, a bit of comedy and, of course, sketches.

Somehow the stars, Miss Heatherston and Sinatra, got lost in the shuffle and when they appeared, it seemed they were guest performers.

A pair of real pros, both mature performers, dominated the hour: Paul Lynde and Barbara Heller and they had a big assist from a fresh young standup comic, Stu Gilliam.

While Sinatra and Joey were just dandy singing songs like "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and "Exactly Like You," it was the authoritative Lynde and Miss Healer who moved in and saved the day in the sketches.

Lynde played most successfully a downcast Clark Kent deciding at long last to reveal his true identity as Superman.

This first of 10 summer shows was nicely produced and directed. It did, however, indicate that the young stars are not as yet quite able to handle such a big responsibility.

The Thursday night rerun of NBC's "Dragnet" may be the prototype of the sort of police action show we will encounter frequently next season with a de-emphasis on violence.

The first half of the show was simply an ill-conceived lecture on the responsibilities of the police officer to get along with civilians of the community. Then, in a real quickie of a story, Sergeant Friday managed to talk a traffic violator into giving himself up and face a $12.50 fine.

It was all very educational, but it sure was not the stuff that gripping entertainment is made from.

Convict Chasteen In Kidnaping Of Adams Official

WEST UNION, Ohio (AP) — Charles Chasteen of Franklin was convicted Thursday on a charge of kidnaping Adams County Commissioner Forrest Mason recently.

An Adams County jury handed down the guilty verdict and Judge James Lang Jr. sentenced Chasteen to 5-30 years in the penitentiary.

Chasteen 23, was also charged with robbing Mason but did not have a jury trial on that charge. He changed a plea of not guilty to guilty on the robbery charge and was sentenced to 10 - 25 years.

Chasteen said during the trial that he joined two others in forcing Mason into a car at gun point and then robbing him, because he was afraid of one of his companions. He referred to Walter Brogan, 25, Latham, who was killed later in the night of the robbery when he exchanged gunfire with a Hillsboro patrolman.

NEW YORK (AP) — Experts today foresee a vast reshuffling ahead in the location and makeup of theological seminaries in America.

But it is expected to meet entrenched resistance.

Describing the present prevailing pattern of small denominational seminaries, widely dispersed across the country and emphasizing "sectarian isolationism," a two-year study report says:

"The whole apparatus is coming to look more like a monument to history rather than an instrument designed to serve the needs of the contemporary church."

Man Shoots Woman, Self In Quarrel

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (AP) — "Come on in, Tom, I won't shoot you," said 65-year-old Garnett Williams, who was approached by two policemen in the driveway of his home here Thursday night.

Williams, according to patrolmen Tom and Randall Newsum, who are brothers, then walked into the one-story frame house.

The policemen heard a shot, ran into the house and found Williams, a retired truck driver and concrete worker, his wife, Sue, and another woman, lying on the floor, all dead from gunshot wounds.

A .38 caliber revolver lay near Williams' body.

Police Chief James McKee said Williams, who had been in ill health, apparently shot his 58-year-old wife and Mrs. Eva Stafford, 58, Springfield, before turning the gun on himself.

McKee said the shooting apparently followed a domestic argument.

"Thus we are inclined to believe that these risks are not likely to include outright 'conversion' to another confessional tradition," it added.

But the report concedes that "deeply ingrained traditions of seminary autonomy" are expected to deter the necessary cooperative ventures, adding:

"These institutional traditions of autonomy and separatism are reinforced by the predominantly local patterns of finance and control which are characteristic of most seminary enterprises."

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Goldiggers" is a variety confection which is supposed to mind the NBC store for a few weeks while the owner of the hour, Dean Martin, has a vacation. It probably sounded like a better idea in the preshooting conferences than it seemed in the premiere.

It is basically a combination of 1968 youth in the costumes of the depression thirties and singing the old songs with a modern beat.

That mixture, presumably would catch the whole audience — the kids because Joey Heatherton and Frank Sinatra Jr. are starting, and the older crowd because it will remind them of the good old days.

The result was a rather incongruous mish-mash of amusing musical moments, one of those inescapable spoofs of "Bonnie and Clyde," some production numbers, a bit of comedy and, of course, sketches.

Somehow the stars, Miss Heatherston and Sinatra, got lost in the shuffle and when they appeared, it seemed they were guest performers.

A pair of real pros, both mature performers, dominated the hour: Paul Lynde and Barbara Heller and they had a big assist from a fresh young standup comic, Stu Gilliam.

While Sinatra and Joey were just dandy singing songs like "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and "Exactly Like You," it was the authoritative Lynde and Miss Heller who moved in and saved the day in the sketches.

Lynde played most successfully a downcast Clark Kent deciding at long last to reveal his true identity as Superman.

This first of 10 summer shows was nicely produced and directed. It did, however, indicate that the young stars are not as yet quite able to handle such a big responsibility.

The Thursday night rerun of NBC's "Dragnet" may be the prototype of the sort of police action show we will encounter frequently next season with a de-emphasis on violence.

The first half of the show was simply an ill-conceived lecture on the responsibilities of the police officer to get along with civilians of the community. Then, in a real quickie of a story, Sergeant Friday managed to talk a traffic violator into giving himself up and face a $12.50 fine.

It was all very educational, but it sure was not the stuff that gripping entertainment is made from.

Convict Chasteen In Kidnaping Of Adams Official

WEST UNION, Ohio (AP) — Charles Chasteen of Franklin was convicted Thursday on a charge of kidnaping Adams County Commissioner Forrest Mason recently.

An Adams County jury handed down the guilty verdict and Judge James Lang Jr. sentenced Chasteen to 5-30 years in the penitentiary.

Chasteen 23, was also charged with robbing Mason but did not have a jury trial on that charge.

He changed a plea of not guilty to guilty on the robbery charge and was sentenced to 10 - 25 years.

Chasteen said during the trial that he joined two others in forcing Mason into a car at gun point and then robbing him, because he was afraid of one of his companions. He referred to Walter Brogan, 25, Latham, who was killed later in the night of the robbery when he exchanged gunfire with a Hillsboro patrolman.

NEW YORK (AP) — Experts today foresee a vast reshuffling ahead in the location and makeup of theological seminaries in America.

But it is expected to meet entrenched resistance.

Describing the present prevailing pattern of small denominational seminaries, widely dispersed across the country and emphasizing "sectarian isolation," a two-year study report says:

"The whole apparatus is coming to look more like a monument to history rather than an instrument designed to serve the needs of the contemporary church."

In its place, the report predicts a sweeping "revision in the current map" of American seminaries, drawing them together increasingly into "a small number of major clusters" near large universities.

These clusters "will be ecumenical in character," including "groups of confessionally based seminaries" maintaining their denominational links, but with transdenominational, interlocking programs with others, the report says.

It notes that under the pressure of current conditions, the trend already is under way, with newly forming Protestant-Catholic seminary complexes in Boston, New York, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Chicago and Rochester, N.Y.

The report was drawn up by an eight-member commission of Protestant and Catholic scholars for the American Association of Theological Schools, which includes 150 seminaries and divinity schools. It met June 10-13 in St. Louis.

It says the rise of the ecumenical movement for Christian unity has reduced historic differences and made clear that those studying for the priesthood or ministry must do so "in a common setting."

"Small seminaries operating in physical and sectarian isolation from each other simply cannot effectively respond to the challenge of ecumenism," the report says.

The report cited a number of metropolitan-university cities where facilities exist for joint groupings, including:

Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.; Washington, D.C.; Atlanta, Ga.; Austin, Tex.; Denver, Colo.; Nashville, Tenn.; New Haven, Conn.; St. Louis, Mo., and several Canadian cities.

Rising costs and competition for quality faculty members also were cited as demanding cooperative seminary enterprises, rather than the past system of denominational seminaries trying to "go it alone."

The commission making the report was headed by the Rev. Dr. Arthur R. McKay, president of Chicago's McCormick Theological Seminary.

The modern pluralistic atmosphere of life, in addition to demanding that clergymen understand those of "different Christian traditions," also requires them to deal with varied "people, values, ideas" beyond churchly bounds, the report says.

This means clergymen should be trained in a context that not only is multidimensional but which also involves cultural variety and experiences, such as are available in large university centers, the report adds.

In the past, it says, the "seminary has been regarded as the place in which a man must learn that he is a Lutheran, or a Presbyterian or a Roman Catholic," but the churches now recognize they share a common heritage and concerns.

If students of the different churches study together, however, the question arises, as the report notes, "How can we be certain that our men will emerge as good Methodists?"

There is no way to guarantee it, the report concedes, adding that there are "some risks," but it notes that in the joint operations already going on, there has been "an almost total absence of evidence of proselytism."

"Thus we are inclined to believe that these risks are not likely to include outright 'conversion' to another confessional tradition," it added.

But the report concedes that "deeply ingrained traditions of seminary autonomy" are expected to deter the necessary cooperative ventures, adding: "These institutional traditions of autonomy and separatism are reinforced by the predominantly local patterns of finance and control which are characteristic of most seminary enterprises."

Man Shoots Woman, Self In Quarrel

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (AP) — "Come on in, Tom, I won't shoot you," said 65-year-old Garnett Williams, who was approached by two policemen in the driveway of his home here Thursday night.

Williams, according to patrolmen Tom and Randall Newsum, who are brothers, then walked into the one-story frame house.

The policemen heard a shot, ran into the house and found Williams, a retired truck driver and concrete worker, his wife, Sue, and another woman, lying on the floor, all dead from gunshot wounds.

A .38 caliber revolver lay near Williams' body. Police Chief James McKee said Williams, who had been in ill health, apparently shot his 58-year-old wife and Mrs. Eva Stafford, 58, Springfield, before turning the gun on himself. McKee said the shooting apparently followed a domestic argument.

Matching Public Mood

When the House of Representatives voted to withhold federal aid or grants from students and teachers who participate in campus riots, sit-ins, seizures or other disruptions, it reflected the mood of the people it represents.

Since 25 percent of college and university students now have some federal funds helping with their expenses, this bill could have a dampening effect on the popularity of campus uprisings.

Congress, like a majority of adult Americans, is shocked by the waste of the university disruptions. This comes in direct reaction to the debacle at Columbia, where more than 27,000 students lost their privileges to attend classes in an orderly fashion, because of the violence of a few hundred trouble makers.

A New York congressman, Otis Pike, summed up the parental feeling which many would like to see applied to young advocates of violence:

"I've got two children in college and I've told them they can do all these things. They can tie up the dean. They can steal papers out of the office. I can't stop them. But I told them if they do these things, it will be at their own expense, not mine."

They should not be done at the expense of American taxpayers, either.

Decline of Old Standards

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Samuel Eliot Morison, the old "Admiral" of the Harvard University history department whose salty chronicling of Columbus's voyages, the maritime history of Massachusetts, and the naval battles of World War II, are among our more priceless classics. Is on the warpath against the intellectuals who have been running our country down, and I for one love it. But why doesn't Professor Morison have more effect in his own Cambridge, Mass., balliwick, which cartoonist Al Capp, a resident, tells me is Schlesinger-Galbraith country, not Morison country?

Admiral Morison's ire takes on rippling and cascading form in an eloquent letter to the Saturday Review in which he lambasts Harvey Wheeler, a fellow of Robert M. Hutchins Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, for calling America an "imperialist culture" which is afflicted with "deep-seated racism" beyond that of other societies. What makes the Admiral's attack on the "new history" and the "new sociology" notable is not so much its vehemence as its refusal to give twisted meaning to old words.

Is America more "racist" than England or France, for example? Professor Morison recalls living in France after World War I when there was violent agitation in the nationalist press against "les metèques," or "second class citizens" of foreign origin. He could grant that there were racial overtones to the Sacco-Vanzetti case back home in Massachusetts, but there were still many Frenchmen around who echoed the racist slurs that had torn France apart during the days of the Dreyfus case. To this day, says Professor Morison, a Frenchman of "the center" looks down upon Bretons for being "Celtic," Alsations for being "German," and Marseillais for being part of the swarthy southland.

As for the British, the professor remarks upon the more recent riots against the influx of Jamaicans, Pakistanis, and Indians from Kenya and elsewhere. He quotes Thomas Steele, the Mayor of Southall, a borough of London, as saying, "Many Indian families are perfectly decent; it is the numbers I object to." If a comparable thing were said in New York City or in Newark, New Jersey, today by a Mayor, can you imagine the uproar that would ensue? And yet there are British journalists who make a good living out of denigrating America for its prejudices.

Mr. Wheeler's allegation that the United States is "imperialist" really gets Professor Morison's dander up. Our national principle, as the Admiral says, has always been to offer statehood to any territory that we have acquired. Hawaii, a multiracial melting pot, has all the rights and privileges of any of the older states, and Puerto Rico can have statehood any time that it prefers it to commonwealth status. The Philippines didn't want to become a state, though we gave the islands their independence without being compelled to do it. When the late President Diem of South Vietnam was asked if he feared U.S. "imperialism," he said he couldn't very well worry about that as long as the example of our relinquishment of the Philippines remained fresh in his mind.

Professor Morison submits that the United States has the best record of tolerating racial and other minorities of any modern country. The Irish, the Germans, and the Italians had a rough time of it at first, but, as the Admiral says, "they sent for their relatives" instead of going back home. This implies a comparative judgment in our favor. A Volpe is now Governor of Massachusetts instead of being a mayor in a Tuscan or a Sicilian town; we have had three Senators and a President named Kennedy; there is a Negro on the Supreme Court, and another one in the U.S. Senate, and there will be more in both places before we are all dead. It is true that we should move faster to promote better race relations, but as Professor Morison says, there is no point in twisting and perverting American history to "fit half-baked sociological theories."

No point at all. When a Princeton University waives its test requirements to accept seventy-seven Negroes (I have this on the authority of a college president), it is a manifest testimony to the existence of vast reservoirs of good - will. This is not an ugly country in comparison to others. It is merely one country among many that are suffering from the universal decline of older standards. The problem is how to recover some of those standards without putting on hair shirts and without saying that we are evil beyond all other men.

"You infernal fool," thundered Banker Judd. "I'm ninety-five years old." "Exactly," agreed the agency head. "Most of our complaints stem from the behavior of gentlemen in your precise age bracket."

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

What is the difference between a contusion and an abrasion? Is one more serious than the other? Does one or the other suggest the need to be examined by a doctor? What first-aid home treatment should be given for them?

Mrs. M.T., New Jersey
Dear Mrs. T.: Injuries to the skin and to the underlying tissues include, in addition to contusions and abrasions, lacerations and puncture wounds. Before I attempt to show the differences (some of which may be technical), the important aspect that the reader must understand is that they all need clean care as quickly as possible. Any break in the skin invites bacteria which immediately set up housekeeping, begin to multiply, and start an infection.

When the outer layers of the skin have been rubbed off without an actual break, the injury can be called an abrasion. Rubbing the skin against a wrestling mat produces the typical abrasion of the skin, with exposure of tiny blood vessels, with or without bleeding. The simple, effective remedy is cleanliness. The skin should be washed gently with a non-irritating soap and kept covered. In most instances, lots of water and soap is all that is necessary. If bleeding is excessive, pressure with dry, sterile gauze or a clean handkerchief will control it. The wound should be covered, making sure that any adhesive tape used to keep the dressing on is not in contact with the injured skin. Antibiotic ointments are not needed, but somehow these make people feel a little more comfortable, knowing that the control of infection has begun.

A contusion is an injury to the skin which is caused by a blunt, rather than a sharp, cutting object. Almost always, the skin itself is unbroken, but the injury to the underlying tissues such as muscles, blood vessels, nerves and bone, may be severe. Such an injury is almost immediately followed by swelling at the site, caused by seepage of blood into the muscles and other tissues beneath the skin. The pain that accompanies the discoloration and the swelling may be severe because of the stretching of the tissues and spasm of the muscles.

The immediate application of cold tends to reduce the swelling and to control the hemorrhage into the soft tissue. Cold applications can diminish the intensity of the pain. A moderately tight bandage can help control the bleeding and make the patient more comfortable. Later, warm applications are used to help nature absorb the blood from the injured tissue.

This is an excellent first aid measure for most injuries. Cold at the very beginning, warm applications later. This varies, of course, when the doctor later sees the patient in case of severe injury.

Lacerations vary in severity. Simple ones need meticulous cleanliness with soap and water. Severe ones demand the control of bleeding with pressure over the wound. This should be maintained until the victim is seen by a doctor, or taken to a hospital emergency room. Here, the technical cleaning of the wound is followed by antibiotics and tetanus injections when necessary. Puncture wounds need the careful inspection of a physician to be sure that important organs beneath the skin are not injured, even if the outside wound seems negligible.

Break in new shoes slowly to avoid injury, or even possible infection, of the feet.

According to Boyle

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — It was an ordinary luncheon meeting for the office working ladies at their nearby quick service grill and beanyery, the "In-and-Out Club."

They were hen-pecking their problems as usual. A curious male bystander heard these typical examples of current female prose in the industrial arena:

"I would rather stay single forever than marry any of the available jerks in my piece."

"He isn't a bad guy to work for if you don't mind spending eight hours a day with a person who wears a clip-on 75-cent bow tie and whose mind falls apart at 9:02 a.m."

"I would describe him as an employer who is just finding out he is tied alive to a wife he doesn't want to be found dead with."

"When he uses a word I don't understand, I simply cross my legs—and he starts the sentence all over again."

"His basic problem is that his wife does understand him—and so do I."

"Watch out for Maude. She always orders a third one because her boss has four at lunch—and that means she doesn't have to worry about him being able to smell her breath after lunch."

"I hate to go to business and have the kids come home to an empty house. But if I don't go to business, how can we afford a color television set, and you know how important color television is to the modern child."

"Mabel . . . Mabel, honey . . . don't look so blue. You were right and he was wrong. Anyway, none of them are worth it."

"I don't care how much trouble men are, I'd rather argue with one of them than to spend my life cutting up beef kidneys for a cat."

"Well, if the rest of you girls think we should have another round, heaven knows I don't want to be the only kill-joy in the crowd."

"Yeah, don't look at the table to the right now. It's the homey guy who is staring at us. Pretend you don't notice. Maybe the guy next to him—he's better looking—will turn this way. I think he's playing hard to get."

"Well, girls, shall those of us who are free go to an educational program this evening, or meet at somebody's house and take off our shoes and have fun?"

"See him over there—the one with the blue eyes and his mouth full of corn beef and cabbage? Ny-uss, huh. Ny-uss! For him I'd give my blood to the Red Cross."

"I could get a merit raise anytime I want to, but up to now I don't need a merit raise that much."

"Will somebody please tell Mildred to pull her skirt down? This is a business girls' luncheon, not a free burlesque show."

"My husband will probably meet me after work. After all, he should. I lent him the money to put gas in the car."

"Well, girls, shall we head back to the salt mine and start finding out where our bosses are trying to hide out for the rest of the day?"

"Yes, here comes Freddy with the check. Okay, girls, everybody get out their pens and pencils and start figuring. Was it you, Agnes, who ordered the chicken salad or the super club sandwich?"

The Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — If any evidence is needed that the world's monetary problems are still close to a crisis condition it has been provided by reports of a deterioration in the British trade balance.

In recent years confidence in paper money, not just in the pound sterling, has declined steadily, the result of inflation, international payments problems and internal turmoil, that has made people question the societies of which the paper is a symbol.

In the past several months the world has been less eager to hold dollars. The British have been forced to devalue the pound from $2.80 to $2.40. And now the French and their franc are wobbling.

Stated simply, the danger is that these major currencies, which provide the oil for the machinery of international commerce, might become so unacceptable that the gears will begin grinding and might even jam.

Dr. Pierre Rinfret, an international consulting economist, has just released a special report for his corporate customers, called "Crisis and You," in which he describes a financial emergency.

It exists, he says, "when people abandon all forms of securities, bank deposits, debt instruments and representations of money for cash in the strongest currency available, including gold and silver."

The cash, therefore, "is taken out of productive use and disappears into hoard." It is hoarded because to leave it invested might mean, in the hoarder's view, that it would deteriorate or be unavailable when needed.

To some extent this already is occurring. Since November speculators have converted as much as $3 billion of paper into gold, much of it from U.S. vaults. And the situation still isn't stabilized.

If improvements in monetary matters—or the certain prospect of improvements—do not develop in the next few months, some analysts look for more crises, perhaps in the fall, when the International Monetary Fund meets.

The British are trying every measure to avoid another crisis. Britain is on an austerity diet of taxes and wage controls designed to reduce intake and boost output. It's a boxer's regimen.

Half a year after devaluation, when results should be showing, the British have announced that May exports dropped and imports rose, the opposite of what was desired.

The trade figures showed exports $12 million less than in May and imports $24 million higher, despite the fact that exports were made more competitive and imports more expensive by the devaluation.

As a consequence, more faith in the pound was lost. Questions arose as to its real worth, and many people felt that worth was less than $2.40. And so the pound dropped sharply.

Now the question arises: How far would the price of the pound drop if the British and their allies didn't come into the market to buy pounds and thus maintain the price around $2.40?

Talks already are developing among financial men that this artificial price maintenance cannot continue much longer without a reversal in the British trade picture.

If this improvement does not come the pound could be devalued again or left without supports to seek its real level based on supply and demand.

Stars in Drama

By BOB THOMAS
AP Television-Movie Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I couldn't do what I wanted to do, so I simply put it out of my mind and did what was available to me. I didn't like it, but I did a good job of it."

Lena Horne has at last received the opportunity to do what she has long desired. She is playing her first dramatic role, as Richard Widmark's mistress in Universal's "Patch." She also runs a bawdy house in the film, which concerns violence in a Midwestern town at the turn of the century.

Miss Horne is no newcomer to movies. From 1922 to 1956, she sang her sultry songs in such MGM musicals as "Panama Hattie," "I Dood It," "Thousands Cheer," Two Girls and a Sailor," "Ziegfeld Follies," "Till the Clouds Roll By," "Words and Music" and "Meet Me in St. Louis."

She was the only Negro performer appearing regularly in films, but she never appeared in the story portions. Always she was featured in musical solos which could be conveniently cut when the films played the South.

"Cabin in the Sky" and "Stormy Weather" were her only acting roles. Both musicals had all-Negro casts.

Miss Horne says she would have preferred the life of an actress; instead, she became a night club singer. The fact that most critics considered her the best of the song stylists did not enhance her enjoyment of the night club life.

"I never liked it," she remarked. "I found it bearable only because I was protected by two very important people in my life: my husband, Lemmie Hayton, and my manager, Ralph Harris. But even their protection wasn't always enough to prevent incidents from happening."

"That life served its purpose: My children got good educations. But I suspect that I gave it more than I got out of it. Anyway, I suppose I made it easier for those who followed after me."

In recent years Mrs. Horne has been cutting down her singing engagements. It appeared that her acting ambitions would never be realized, and then came "Patch." Producer Richard E. Lyons sent her the script, and she was intrigued with the role. The fact that she is a Negro is never mentioned in the script.

"In the picture I run the most integrated bawdy house that ever was," she said. "There are girls of every color, but no mention is made of that, either."

How does she respond to the acting challenge?

"I don't know," she reflected. "I'm just playing it naturally. After the recent events in Memphis and Los Angeles, it is hard for me to realize what is real and what is staged. Robert Kennedy's assassination was the most difficult to comprehend, because you could see the events happening right before you on television."

"It's the same on the news shows about Vietnam. You see a man fall before your eyes, and you find it difficult to realize that he has actually died. 'That's how it is with this picture: 'Violent events have been so much with me that I'm not certain what is make - believe.'"

In "Patch," she does not sing a note, and that pleases her immensely. "At least they haven't asked me yet," she smiled. "If they say, 'How about a song, Lena?' I'll know I'm not doing so hot. Then I might have the sense to be worried. Right now I'm just numb."

Matching Public Mood

When the House of Representatives voted to withhold federal aid or grants from students and teachers who participate in campus riots, sit-ins, seizures or other disruptions, it reflected the mood of the people it represents.

Since 25 percent of college and university students now have some federal funds helping with their expenses, this bill could have a dampening effect on the popularity of campus uprisings.

Congress, like a majority of adult Americans, is shocked by the waste of the university disruptions. This comes in direct reaction to the debacle at Columbia, where more than 27,000 students lost their privileges to attend classes in an orderly fashion, because of the violence of a few hundred trouble makers.

A New York congressman, Otis Pike, summed up the parental feeling which many would like to see applied to young advocates of violence:

"I've got two children in college and I've told them they can do all these things. They can tie up the dean. They can steal papers out of the office. I can't stop them. But I told them if they do these things, it will be at their own expense, not mine."

They should not be done at the expense of American taxpayers, either.

Decline of Old Standards

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Samuel Eliot Morison, the old "Admiral" of the Harvard University history department whose salty chroniclings of Columbus's voyages, the maritime history of Massachusetts, and the naval battles of World War II, are among our more priceless classics. In the warpath against the intellectuals who have been running our country down, and I for one love it. But why doesn't Professor Morison have more effect in his own Cambridge, Mass., bailiwick, which cartoonist Al Capp, a resident, tells me is Schlesinger-Galbraith country, not Morison country?

Admiral Morison's ire takes on rippling and cascading form in an eloquent letter to the Saturday Review in which he lambasts Harvey Wheeler, a fellow of Robert M. Hutchins' Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, for calling America an "imperialist culture" which is afflicted with "deep-seated racism" beyond that of other societies. What makes the Admiral's attack on the "new history" and the "new sociology" notable is not so much its vehemence as its command of facts and its refusal to give twisted meaning to old words.

Is America more "racist" than England or France, for example? Professor Morison recalls living in France after World War I when there was violent agitation in the nationalist press against "les metèques," or "second class citizens" of foreign origin. He could grant that there were racial overtones to the Sacco-Vanzetti case back home in Massachusetts, but there were still many Frenchmen around who echoed the racist slurs that had torn France apart during the days of the Dreyfus case. To this day, says Professor Morison, a Frenchman of "the center" looks down upon Bretons for being "Celtic," Alsations for being "German," and Marseillais for being part of the swarthy southland.

As for the British, the professor remarks upon the more recent riots against the influx of Jamaicans, Pakistanis, and Indians from Kenya and elsewhere. He quotes Thomas Steele, the Mayor of Southall, a borough of London, as saying, "Many Indian families are perfectly decent; it is the numbers I object to." If a comparable thing were said in New York City or in Newark, New Jersey, today by a Mayor, can you imagine the uproar that would ensue? And yet there are British journalists who make a good living out of denigrating America for its prejudices.

Mr. Wheeler's allegation that the United States is "imperialist" really gets Professor Morison's dander up. Our national principle, as the Admiral says, has always been to offer statehood to any territory that we have acquired. Hawaii, a multiracial melting pot, has all the rights and privileges of any of the older states, and Puerto Rico can have statehood any time that it prefers it to commonwealth status. The Philippines didn't want to become a state, though we gave the islands their independence without being compelled to do it. When the late President Diem of South Vietnam was asked if he feared U.S. "imperialism," he said he couldn't very well worry about that as long as the example of our relinquishment of the Philippines remained fresh in his mind.

Professor Morison submits that the United States has the best record of tolerating racial and other minorities of any modern country. The Irish, the Germans, and the Italians had a rough time of it at first, but, as the Admiral says, "they sent for their relatives" instead of going back home. This implies a comparative judgment in our favor. A Volpe is now Governor of Massachusetts instead of being a mayor in a Tuscan or a Sicilian town; we have had three Senators and a President named Kennedy; there is a Negro on the Supreme Court, and another one in the U.S. Senate, and there will be more in both places before we are all dead. It is true that we should move faster to promote better race relations, but as Professor Morison says, there is no point in twisting and perverting American history to "fit half-baked sociological theories."

No point at all. When a Princeton University waives its test requirements to accept seventy-seven Negroes (I have this on the authority of a college president), it is a manifest testimony to the existence of vast reservoirs of good - will. This is not an ugly country in comparison to others. It is merely one country among many that are suffering from the universal decline of older standards. The problem is how to recover some of those standards without putting on hair shirts and without saying that we are evil beyond all other men.

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

What is the difference between a contusion and an abrasion? Is one more serious than the other? Does one or the other suggest the need to be examined by a doctor? What first-aid home treatment should be given for them?

Mrs. M.T., New Jersey
Dear Mrs. T.: Injuries to the skin and to the underlying tissues include, in addition to contusions and abrasions, lacerations and puncture wounds. Before I attempt to show the differences (some of which may be technical), the important aspect that the reader must understand is that they all need clean care as quickly as possible. Any break in the skin invites bacteria which immediately set up housekeeping, begin to multiply, and start an infection.

When the outer layers of the skin have been rubbed off without an actual break, the injury can be called an abrasion. Rubbing the skin against a wrestling mat produces the typical abrasion of the skin, with exposure of tiny blood vessels, with or without bleeding. The simple, effective remedy is cleanliness. The skin should be washed gently with a non-irritating soap and kept covered. In most instances, lots of water and soap is all that is necessary. If bleeding is excessive, pressure with dry, sterile gauze or a clean handkerchief will control it. The wound should be covered, making sure that any adhesive tape used to keep the dressing on is not in contact with the injured skin. Antibiotic ointments are not needed, but somehow these make people feel a little more comfortable, knowing that the control of infection has begun.

A contusion is an injury to the skin which is caused by a blunt, rather than a sharp, cutting object. Almost always, the skin itself is unbroken, but the injury to the underlying tissues such as muscles, blood vessels, nerves and bone, may be severe. Such an injury is almost immediately followed by swelling at the site, caused by seepage of blood into the muscles and other tissues beneath the skin. The pain that accompanies the discoloration and the swelling may be severe because of the stretching of the tissues and spasm of the muscles.

The immediate application of cold tends to reduce the swelling and to control the hemorrhage into the soft tissue. Cold applications can diminish the intensity of the pain. A moderately tight bandage can help control the bleeding and make the patient more comfortable. Later, warm applications are used to help nature absorb the blood from the injured tissue.

This is an excellent first aid measure for most injuries. Cold at the very beginning, warm applications later. This varies, of course, when the doctor later sees the patient in case of severe injury.

Lacerations vary in severity. Simple ones need meticulous cleanliness with soap and water. Severe ones demand the control of bleeding with pressure over the wound. This should be maintained until the victim is seen by a doctor, or taken to a hospital emergency room. Here, the technical cleaning of the wound is followed by antibiotics and tetanus injections when necessary. Puncture wounds need the careful inspection of a physician to be sure that important organs beneath the skin are not injured, even if the outside wound seems negligible.

Break in new shoes slowly to avoid injury, or even possible infection, of the feet.

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — It was an ordinary luncheon meeting for the office working ladies at their nearby quick service grill and beehive, the "In-and-Out Club."

They were hen-pecking their problems as usual. A curious male bystander heard these typical examples of current female prose in the industrial arena:

"I would rather stay single forever than marry any of the available jerks in my place."

"He isn't a bad guy to work for if you don't mind spending eight hours a day with a person who wears a clip-on 75-cent bow tie and whose mind falls apart at 9:02 a.m."

"I would describe him as an employer who is just finding out he is tied alive to a wife he doesn't want to be found dead with."

"When he uses a word I don't understand, I simply cross my legs—and he starts the sentence all over again."

"His basic problem is that his wife does understand him—and so do I."

"Watch out for Maude. She always orders a third one because her boss has four at lunch—and that means she doesn't have to worry about him being able to smell her breath after lunch."

"I hate to go to business and have the kids come home to an empty house. But if I don't go to business, how can we afford a color television set, and you know how important color television is to the modern child."

"Mabel... Mabel, honey... don't look so blue. You were right and he was wrong. Anyway, none of them are worth it."

"I don't care how much trouble men are, I'd rather argue with one of them than to spend my life cutting up beef kidneys for a cat."

"Well, if the rest of you girls think we should have another round, heaven knows I don't want to be the only kill-joy in the crowd."

"Yeah, don't look at the table to the right now. It's the homey guy who is staring at us. Pretend you don't notice. Maybe the guy next to him—he's better looking—will turn this way. I think he's playing hard to get."

"Well, girls, shall those of who are free go to an educational program this evening, or meet at somebody's house and take off our shoes and have fun?"

"See him over there—the one with the blue eyes and his mouth full of corned beef and cabbage? Ny-uss, huh. Ny-uss! For him I'd give my blood to the Red Cross."

"I could get a merit raise anytime I want to, but up to now I don't need a merit raise that much."

"Will somebody please tell Mildred to pull her skirt down? This is a business girls' luncheon, not a free burlesque show."

"My husband will probably meet me after work. After all, he should. I lent him the money to put gas in the car."

"Well, girls, shall we head back to the salt mine and start finding out where our bosses are trying to hide out for the rest of the day?"

"Yes, here comes Freddy with the check. Okay, girls, everybody get out their pens and pencils and start figuring. Was it you, Agnes, who ordered the chicken salad or the super club sandwich?"

The Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — If any evidence is needed that the world's monetary problems are still close to a crisis condition it has been provided by reports of a deterioration in the British trade balance.

In recent years confidence in paper money, not just in the pound sterling, has declined steadily, the result of inflation, international payments problems and internal turmoil that has made people question the societies of which the paper is a symbol.

In the past several months the world has been less eager to hold dollars. The British have been forced to devalue the pound from $2.80 to $2.40. And now the French and their franc are wobbling.

Stated simply, the danger is that these major currencies, which provide the oil for the machinery of international commerce, might become so unacceptable that the gears will begin grinding and might even jam.

Dr. Pierre Rinfret, an international consulting economist, has just released a special report for his corporate customers, called "Crisis and You," in which he describes a financial emergency.

It exists, he says, "when people abandon all forms of securities, bank deposits, debt instruments and representations of money for cash in the strongest currency available, including gold and silver."

The cash, therefore, "is taken out of productive use and disappears into hoard." It is hoarded because to leave it invested might mean, in the hoarder's view, that it would deteriorate or be unavailable when needed.

To some extent this already is occurring. Since November speculators have converted as much as $3 billion of paper into gold, much of it from U.S. vaults. And the situation still isn't stabilized.

If improvements in monetary matters—or the certain prospect of improvements—do not develop in the next few months, some analysts look for more crises, perhaps in the fall, when the International Monetary Fund meets.

The British are trying every measure to avoid another crisis. Britain is on an austerity diet of taxes and wage controls designed to reduce intake and boost output. It's a boxer's regimen.

Half a year after devaluation, when results should be showing, the British have announced that May exports dropped and imports rose, the opposite of what was desired.

The trade figures showed exports $12 million less than in May and imports $24 million higher, despite the fact that exports were made more competitive and imports more expensive by the devaluation.

As a consequence, more faith in the pound was lost. Questions arose as to its real worth, and many people felt that worth was less than $2.40. And so the pound dropped sharply.

Now the question arises: How far would the price of the pound drop if the British and their allies didn't come into the market to buy pounds and thus maintain the price around $2.40?

Talks already are developing among financial men that this artificial price maintenance cannot continue much longer without a reversal in the British trade picture.

If this improvement does not come the pound could be devalued again or left without supports to seek its real level based on supply and demand.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Family 'Tangled Up' by Longhair Son

DEAR ABBY: As I write this I am practically blinded by tears. My husband told our 17-year-old son that if he didn't come home with a haircut tonight, he didn't have to come home at all. It is midnight, and Jon is not home yet.

Why should something like the length of a boy's hair make such a big difference to a father? Jon is not a "bad" boy. All the boys he goes with have long hair.

Jon and his father have fought about this for over a year and now it has come to a showdown, because he finally pushed the boy too far and gave him an ultimatum.

If something happens to Jon I will never forgive my husband for his stubbornness.

I don't like long hair on boys, either, but at least I didn't drive my own son out of the house because of it.

Please, please put something in your column about fathers who always have to have the last word. I have given up.

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: There is much more involved here than hair. In a good father-son relationship, the father never gives his 17-year-old son an "ultimatum" merely because he "outranks" him. Patience and understanding should be forthcoming from the older and wiser man.

Also I also prefer short hair on men, I realize that long hair is "in", and kids have as much right to their fads as adults.

Tell Father to emphasize the more permanent and lasting aspects of his son's character, and forget the hair for now. It will grow shorter (or disappear entirely) soon enough.

DEAR ABBY: I cannot for the life of me understand what is the matter with our 24-year-old daughter. She started going with a 44-year-old man, and now she says she is going to marry him! Abby, this man is nearly old enough to be her father! He isn't rich and he isn't especially good looking, but she says she "loves" him. We are just sick about it.

Our daughter has worked and supported herself since she was 18, and she dated nice young fellows her own age, but when she met this man she lost all her good sense.

How can we get some sense thru her head before it's too late?

HER MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Don't expect to get anything "thru her head." A girl "in love" has a filter-tipped brain. If marrying this man is a mistake, she may have to learn the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: Re: the married man who had a heart attack in the apartment of another woman at 2 a.m., listen to this:

Several years ago, a friend of ours (I'll call him Larry) was involved in an automobile accident with a lady companion in the wee hours of the morning. (He was supposed to have been "out with the boys.")

The lady, who was an attractive widow and a friend of his wife, was only slightly shaken up, but Larry had to be hospitalized for several weeks. During that time Larry's wife found out that there had been some hanky-panky between this widow and Larry, altho they both insisted they were only "good friends."

The day Larry was to be brought home from the hospital, his wife arranged that he be taken to the widow's home! It was midafternoon and the widow was entertaining her garden club.

Can you imagine the scene when the ambulance pulled up in front of the widow's house, and Larry was carried in on a stretcher over his vigorous protests?

The widow, of course, told them they had made a mistake, whereupon they put Larry back into the ambulance and delivered him to his own home. The club members went home holding their sides, the widow was mortified, Larry's wife took him back, and at this writing they are living happily ever after.

Dear Abby: Family 'Tangled Up' by Longhair Son

DEAR ABBY: As I write this I am practically blinded by tears. My husband told our 17-year-old son that if he didn't come home with a haircut tonight, he didn't have to come home at all. It is midnight, and Jon is not home yet.

Why should something like the length of a boy's hair make such a big difference to a father? Jon is not a "bad" boy. All the boys he goes with have long hair.

Jon and his father have fought about this for over a year and now it has come to a showdown, because he finally pushed the boy too far and gave him an ultimatum.

If something happens to Jon I will never forgive my husband for his stubbornness. I don't like long hair on boys, either, but at least I didn't drive my own son out of the house because of it.

Please, please put something in your column about fathers who always have to have the last word. I have given up.

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: There is much more involved here than hair. In a good father-son relationship, the father never gives his 17-year-old son an "ultimatum" merely because he "outranks" him. Patience and understanding should be forthcoming from the older and wiser man.

Altho I also prefer short hair on men, I realize that long hair is "in", and kids have as much right to their fads as adults.

Tell Father to emphasize the more permanent and lasting aspects of his son's character, and forget the hair for now. It will grow shorter (or disappear entirely) soon enough.

DEAR ABBY: I cannot for the life of me understand what is the matter with our 24-year-old daughter. She started going with a 44-year-old man, and now she says she is going to marry him! Abby, this man is nearly old enough to be her father! He isn't rich and he isn't especially good looking, but she says she "loves" him. We are just sick about it.

Our daughter has worked and supported herself since she was 18, and she dated nice young fellows her own age, but when she met this man she lost all her good sense.

How can we get some sense thru her head before it's too late?

HER MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Don't expect to get anything "thru her head." A girl "in love" has a filter-tipped brain. If marrying this man is a mistake, she may have to learn the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: Re: the married man who had a heart attack in the apartment of another woman at 2 a.m., listen to this:

Several years ago, a friend of ours (I'll call him Larry) was involved in an automobile accident with a lady companion in the wee hours of the morning. (He was supposed to have been "out with the boys.")

The lady, who was an attractive widow and a friend of his wife, was only slightly shaken up, but Larry had to be hospitalized for several weeks. During that time Larry's wife found out that there had been some hanky-panky between this widow and Larry, altho they both insisted they were only "good friends."

The day Larry was to be brought home from the hospital, his wife arranged that he be taken to the widow's home!

It was midafternoon and the widow was entertaining her garden club.

Can you imagine the scene when the ambulance pulled up in front of the widow's house, and Larry was carried in on a stretcher over his vigorous protests?

The widow, of course, told them they had made a mistake, whereupon they put Larry back into the ambulance and delivered him to his own home.

The club members went home holding their sides, the widow was mortified, Larry's wife took him back, and at this writing they are living happily ever after.

Phil Hutchings Named Leader Of Negro Group

Move Is Seen Toward End Of 'Personalities'

NEWARK (AP) — Philip Hutchings, a soft spoken, young black organizer in Newark has been chosen to succeed Rap Brown as leader of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

An informant in the Negro community here said of the change, "SNCC seems to want to get away from the cult of personality that Brown and Stokely Carmichael developed and go back to the unglamorous but necessary job of organizing grass-roots people around specific programs."

Hutchings, 26, is reliably reported to have been elected at a meeting last weekend in Atlanta, the group's headquarters.

SNCC has refused to confirm the story for "the white press," but those who have worked closely here with Hutchings for the past three years have confirmed it. Hutchings himself has been unavailable for comment.

The post itself has been changed to signal the new direction of the financially hard-pressed Black Power organization.

Hutchings will be "program coordinator," not "chairman," a post which has been abolished.

Brown, who served as chairman since May 1967, reportedly did not seek re-election. He was recently sentenced to five years in prison on a federal firearms charge. The sentence is under appeal.

Apache Girl Gets Playhouse, Fort Through Letter

LA PUENTE, Calif. (AP) — The newest fort in the West answers the dream of a 12-year-old Apache girl even though it isn't made out of highway signs.

In a ceremony attended by five little Indians and eight cowboy musicians, Pauline Chavez raised an American flag over her fort Thursday.

Two weeks ago, without telling her parents, Pauline bid $13 for 13 freeway signs the California Division of Highways had put up for sale.

"I think my dad could use those signs to make a playhouse for my sister and I, and a fort for my brothers, she wrote.

However, a grocery chain then offered a playhouse and a group of musicians built a fort. The 32-by-30-foot stockade was designed by violinist Sammy Leichter and he and the other palefaced spent Thursday erecting it in the Chavez yard.

Viet Cong Use Downed U.S. Pilots as Bait

By JOHN T. WHEELER
Associated Press Writer
DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — A doomed Marine pilot, crumpled below his parachute deep in enemy territory, became unwitting bait for a huge Viet Cong ambush against helicopters.

Enemy troops pointedly ignored the flier, who lay with a broken leg and arm, trying to call in Air Force rescue helicopters. The Viet Cong were digging in all around the pilot, just out of sight and earshot, waiting.

When the camouflaged choppers arrived with their fighter-bombers escorts, they suspected a trap at once. They had seen many before. But traps are part of the business and pilots of the Jolly Green Giant rescue ships never questioned their next move—try and get their man out.

In the past year, the 37th Aerospace Recovery and Rescue Squadron has rescued more than 250 men from North and South Vietnam. The cost, three helicopters and eight killed of the 21 crews assigned to the squadron. Many of the saves were called miracles by the men who were picked up and those who did the job.

This time there was no miracle along the ridge line overlooking the A Shau Valley hard on the Laotian frontier. Unless it could be said, as some did later, that it was a wonder things weren't worse.

After fighter-bombers hit the area, the first camouflaged helicopter dipped its nose and sliced in for a rescue attempt. Withering groundfire greeted the chopper as it neared the Leatherneck pilot, and the craft shuddered under the impact of the bullets.

Jury Hears
Hodges Case
Testimony

NAPOLEON, Ohio (AP) — Prosecutor Edmund Peper told a Henry County Common Pleas Court jury here Thursday that a gun owned by Mark D. Hodges was used in the wounding of a high school girl last year.

Hodges, a 28-year-old service station attendant from Beavercreek, is being tried on a charge of shooting with intent to kill Denise Fortner.

Miss Fortner took the witness stand and testified that Hodges bumped into her motorcycle last August, turned his car around on a county road, came back and shot her in the stomach.

Peper said that when Hodges was later arrested on another charge, a .25 caliber Beretta was found in his possession. Ballistics test indicate the bullet taken from Miss Fortner's body came from Hodges' weapon, he said.

Defense attorney Joseph Dapone contended, however, that Miss Fortner had been involved in an orgy and that he had a witness who would testify that no car was following her shortly before the shooting.

Tragedy Ends Party
DEFIANCE, Ohio (AP)—The second birthday party for Dodd Russell Bowditch of Rt. 8, Defiance, turned into a tragedy Thursday when the boy apparently fell into a swimming pool and drowned.

The pilot pulled up and fighter-bombers went back to work. A second chopper slowed above the downed man but heavy fire raked the twin-engine craft. One of the spotter plane pilots called in, "Your left side is on fire, Jolly Green. Get outta there."

The pilot tried, pulling his stricken craft up and away from the trap and limping to the east. The fire diminished, but the bird's rotors began turning more and more slowly and the chopper fell. When it hit the ground, a huge fireball consumed the fragile craft. The four men aboard presumably were killed instantly.

Back at the Da Nang base the radioed news of the disaster first brought shock and then a mass of volunteers to go after their friends and the Marine jet pilot.

Capt. Jerry Griggs, Kannapolis, N.C., and his crew were next at the scene. He said: "After the Skyraiders worked over the area, we went in. When we started to hover over the Marine, it seemed the whole right side of the countryside erupted with groundfire. I could feel the hits on the aircraft."

Griggs' ship also caught fire but the copilot, Capt. Harry Hagen Jr., of Seattle, Wash., reported later: "Somehow we got away."

Away from the ridgeline trap, but far from home free.

The severely damaged helicopter tried to land some distance away "and the whole place blew up in our face. There were so many streams of tracers that it looked like 1,000 red pencils drawing lines in front of us," Hagen said.

With luck, a great deal of luck, this crew limped into the Marine base at Khe Sanh.

By now the Marine on the ground had stopped his radio transmission. With the odds against them, the rescue men might have assumed he was dead.

Maj. Harvie L. Stringer, Cookeville, Tenn., who escorted Griggs to Khe Sanh, returned and "figured most of the big guns were silenced and that it was worth another try."

Two skyraiders preceded Stringer's craft, two were on each side and two followed him into the pickup zone. Despite all the bombing and strafing runs, no one was too surprised when Sgt. Robert Baldwin, 26, Burkburnett, Tex., the flight engineer, shouted: "Pull up! pull up! They're shooting."

Baldwin and Sgt. Steve Northern, 21, Riverside, Calif., began pouring machine-gun fire into the Viet Cong positions, killing some of the enemy and forcing the rest to keep their heads down.

Northern, the pararescue medic, was at the helicopter's door waiting to go down via a cable hoist to pick up the downed pilot. Then "the whole hill opened up on us," he recalls.

One of the covering fighter bombers radioed, "Get away from the ridge, Jolly. Get away from the ridge. Charlie is all over the place."

Ominously the center of the fire was only 20 yards from the downed pilot.

Maj. Stringer reported that the downed Marine was crumpled up and not moving, but it was decided to try one last time.

The results were about the same. Heavy fire, the rescue chopper hit several times before being forced to abandon the effort.

The total cost of the operation was four Jolly Green men presumed killed, one chopper destroyed, one heavily damaged and two moderately damaged.

It was a bad day—but it was almost a glorious day. Other Jolly Greens from Da Nang had rescued five pilots. The sixth would have made a record for one day.

Next day aerial spotters found the Marine pilot and his chute gone. He is listed as missing and presumed dead.

Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Caughton,

the Jolly Green squadron commander, said: "It's been apparent for some time that the enemy is not capturing downed pilots immediately. He knows we will launch a rescue operation a thing we're up against—every—that will give him a chance to one of us knows it. But we'll try shoot down more of our planes everytime. That's our job."

Buckeye Boy's State Is Over

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Delegates to Buckeye Boy's State head for home today after the school in self-government's model legislature failed to approve stringent gun control legislation sought by Gov. Gregory Huth.
Graduation ceremonies were scheduled for this morning for the 1,360 high school juniors from around Ohio who have been here the past week participating in the American Legion sponsored program.
The Boy's State legislature adjourned Thursday after the House rejected 72-27 a Senate-approved gun control bill that had been sought by Huth.

Study Cleveland Government Space

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's Community Development Department will make an inventory of governmental space requirements for a proposed state, county and city office building.
Mayor Carl B. Stokes asked for the study Thursday after meeting with Gov. James A. Rhodes and the Cuyahoga County commissioners.
The governor pledged state support for the project.

Love is trust. It is belief. It is faith, and like faith it is the substance of all things hoped for. Faith is a young man and woman standing before the altar to be united in holy matrimony. It is a little child holding his mother's hand. It is a patient looking into the eyes of the doctor. It is a mother or father sadly waving goodbye to a son, off to war.

Faith is all this and more! It is trust in divine providence, a belief in joyful reward. It is all mankind kneeling before God in quiet prayer . . . at home . . . in church . . . under the canopy of heaven.

Church is for all of us—a place to strengthen, to increase, to confirm our faith. You can make your faith stronger by going to church this Sunday.

Top Runners In AAU Tilt

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Charlie Greene says he and Jim Hines figure they are about the best around when it comes to running 100 meters.

There are perhaps half a dozen sprinters at the Amateur Athletic Union's Track and Field Championships who are pretty good themselves, but hardly have a case to argue with Greene.

All during the finals of the dash Thursday, the times were phenomenal—Hines won his heat in a wind-aided 9.8, twenths under the listed world mark—so much so that when they measure the track to reconfirm the distance, some skeptics expect it to come up a couple of meters short.

In their respective semifinal heats, both Greene and Hines turned in world record clockings of 9.9 and then Greene went out and nipped Hines in the final, a race that had the first six finishers timed in 10.0.

French Yachtsman Rescued at Sea

LONDON (AP) — French yachtsman Jean De Kat was reported fit and well aboard a Norwegian freighter today after surviving three days in the mid-Atlantic in a tiny rubber life raft.

De Kat, 27, took to the raft Tuesday after his three-hulled yacht Yaksha broke up in a storm which scattered competitors in the single-handed trans-Atlantic race.

Denny Hurley Wins

CINCINNATI (AP) — Denny Hurley, 15, won the Greater Cincinnati Metropolitan Golf Tournament Thursday in a sudden death playoff and became the tourney's youngest champion ever. The youth from Covington, Ky., beat out Jimmy Woods of Cincinnati to capture the 72-hole event.

Smoke Dust Wins Scioto Feature

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Smoke Dust overtook Tidal Hanover in the middle of the stretch Thursday night to win the $8,500 Challenge Stakes for 4-year-olds at Scioto Downs.

It was the fourth victory in seven starts this year for the winner, which returned $3.40, $2.80 and $2.20. Front Row placed for $4.20 and $2.20 while Tidal Hanover slipped to third and returned $2.20.

The 3-4 daily double combination of Four Oaks and Val Gaye brought $30.

See Casper As Favorite If He Putts

TORONTO (AP) — Billy Casper has the gallery at the $125,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship wondering what will happen when he stops driving for show and starts putting for dough.

Casper, one of the deadliest men around the greens on the U.S. professional golf circuit, took 34 putts in the opening round Thursday and still wound up just two strokes behind the first-round leaders—Bruce Devlin of Australia and Ken Still of Tacoma, Wash.

Still and Devlin, who admitted they "played with a great deal of luck," carded three - under-par 67s over the 6,792-yard St. George's Golf Club layout.

Casper shot a 69 to tie with five other Americans and Moe Norman of Giford, Ont., for third place in the 72-hole tournament that carries a $25,000 first-place prize. The tourney ends Sunday.

"Those greens take a lot of playing after a miss because they're so roly," said Casper, who is aiming for his third straight tournament victory in Canada.

Tied with Casper and Norman at one-under-par 69s were Tom Weiskopf, Lou Graham, R. H. Sikes and Orville Moody, Aaron, Phil Rodgers, Ron Cerrudo and Bob Charles had 70s.

Jack Nicklaus carded a 73, while Gary Player wound up with 74 and Arnold Palmer with 76.

See Casper As Favorite If He Putts

TORONTO (AP) — Billy Casper has the gallery at the $125,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship wondering what will happen when he stops driving for show and starts putting for dough.

Casper, one of the deadliest men around the greens on the U.S. professional golf circuit, took 34 putts in the opening round Thursday and still wound up just two strokes behind the first-round leaders—Bruce Devlin of Australia and Ken Still of Tacoma, Wash.

Still and Devlin, who admitted they "played with a great deal of luck," carded three - under-par 67s over the 6,792-yard St. George's Golf Club layout.

Casper shot a 69 to tie with five other Americans and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., for third place in the 72-hole tournament that carries a $25,000 first-place prize. The tourney ends Sunday.

"Those greens take a lot of playing after a miss because they're so roly," said Casper, who is aiming for his third straight tournament victory in Canada.

Tied with Casper and Norman at one-under-par 69s were Tom Weiskopf, Lou Graham, R. H. Sikes and Orville Moody. Aaron, Phil Rodgers, Ron Cerrudo and Bob Charles had 70s.

Jack Nicklaus carded a 73, while Gary Player wound up with 74 and Arnold Palmer with 76.

Jones Dominates NCAA Golf Tilt

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — "The only good lead is the lead after 72 holes," said Oklahoma State's Grier Jones, as if giving himself an incentive in the NCAA Golf Championships that he is dominating.
He referred to his two-stroke lead after 36 holes entering today's third round on the 71st NCAA tournament and the one-stroke margin Arizona State held over his own Cowboys in the team race.

KING'S WIDOW ADDRESSES RALLY—The statue of Abraham Lincoln is a backdrop as the widow of slain Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. addresses a rally of some 50,000 Poor People's Campaigners in Washington. She said "racism, poverty and war" have combined to make matters worse for poor people.

WILLIAMSPORT NEWS

By Ron Beatty — Phone 986-2581

Summer school is in full swing at Westfall. If anyone wants help with their homework, feel free to ask. I used to help my daughter until suddenly she didn't ask anymore. I figured that it was because I had told her to solve her own questions. Yesterday I ran across some of her old papers and other that teacher didn't know the answers or I didn't understand the question.

Here was one: Tom has 16 marbles. If he divided his marbles equally between two boys, how many marbles would each boy have? Well, my answer was that since Tom was losing his marbles, he couldn't even add let alone divide.

Another: There are 8 girls dancing. If every two girls are partners, how many partners are there? Girls aren't dummies. Some of those girls are going to be dancing with boys and that's what I put.

If mother had a dozen cookies and she gave each boy three cookies, how many boys received cookies? This one wasn't worded right to start with. If she has got a dozen cookies, they are going to get all of them.

Geography was always my meat, so I don't know why she marked this one wrong. If someone ask you the way to Orient, wouldn't you send them up thru Darbyville and not all the way to China or Japan?

Science. How do you make it rain? We disagreed here too. You don't get in a little airplane and throw stuff out on the clouds. All you do is plan to work in the garden or bail hay.

History is simple. If you want to remember the year of the big Ohio River flood, all you do is subtract the 1913 flood from the 1959 flood and subtract the answer of the difference between the 1959 flood from the 1968 flood from your first answer and you get 1937.

Chemistry is too easy for words. That's why they use things like "Ni" for nickel and "Au" for gold? They try to confuse you to make it difficult but it isn't so hard to comprehend. Chemistry is wonderful and the things you can do with it... you couldn't imagine. For instance if you combine Rhodium (rh), Uranium (u), Barium (ba) and Rubidium (rb), you get rhubarb. Try it sometime.

Spelling is a good subject but I've never had trouble spelling words anyway so I skip it this

77 Arrested in Washington Outbreak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor People's Campaign leaders, pleading for nonviolence, managed early this morning to cool off demonstrators angered by the campaign's first serious clashes with police.

Wielding clubs and firing tear gas, police Thursday night arrested 77 demonstrators during tense and angry confrontations.

Several top South Christian Leadership Conference officials, including its president, the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, pleaded at a Resurrection City rally that lasted past midnight for adherence to their nonviolent philosophy.

But none had been on hand during the two most serious incidents, a shouting, shoving contest between police and demonstrators near the Department of Agriculture, and the tear gassing of a crowd after some youngsters threw bottles and sticks at police.

"I am pleading with you to say violence is not the way," Abernathy, president of SCLC told an after-midnight mass meeting in a Resurrection City almost under siege by helmeted, rifle-carrying police.

The violence came just 24 hours after a 50,000-person Solidarity Day crowd prompted Abernathy to promise that civil disobedience would begin in earnest later this week.

The first hints of trouble came when some of an estimated 500 demonstrators at the often-attacked Department of Agriculture blocked main doorways in midafternoon.

Warned by police that such interference was against the law, they refused to budge and went limp to be hauled away by police.

Then, about 100 demonstrators started to march around the block-long building and got into a shouting shoving match with police, some of whom used their night sticks freely.

Blocked from surging into the street at the busy intersection of 14th St. and Independence Ave., they began a series of hit-and-run harassment tactics that kept police hopping and commuters frightened.

Moving rapidly down 14th street in a line that swelled by the minute, they would rush into the six-lane thoroughfare and sit down, thoroughly snarling traffic.

Then, as police bore down on them with nightsticks held at the ready, they would rise at a signal, rush back to the sidewalk, and repeat the maneuver at another intersection.

For almost half an hour the line of demonstrators zig-zagged rapidly back and forth, until suddenly someone did not move quickly enough to avoid slamming into a patrolman. There was the sharp crack of a night stick, and the man went spinning to the ground, sending droplets of blood splattering across the sidewalk.

Immediately the crowd's mood turned ugly. A dinner plate size pool of blood stained the sidewalk where the man's head had lain, and marshals shoved and pleaded with the crowd to get it to return to the Agriculture Department.

At least 20 persons were arrested there before order was restored. The crowd, now grown to about 500, police said, listened to the Rev. Jesse Jackson tell them momentary anger over a few drops of blood was not as important as attaining justice for the "rivers of blood" spilled by Negro martyrs over the years.

But as the cooled-off marchers reached the back gates of Resurrection City, some youngsters began to throw sticks and bottles aimed at police, who finally fired at least 15 canisters of tear gas to restore order.

The Mayor's Report

Citizen Participation

By MAYOR RICHARD L. GERHARDT

We have heard much this year about what has been termed "the new politics." If one examines what the "new politics" is really all about, it is readily seen that it is just a new emphasis on the old and sound principal of maximum citizen participation in government.

The concept briefly stated is that the more citizens involvement which exists in the affairs of city, state and federal government, the better and more responsive the government will be to the people and their needs. Since taking office in January of this year, we have tried continuously to create an atmosphere whereby more citizens would have a voice and could be heard.

Several neighborhood meetings have been held where citizens could talk directly to us. They were held not at City Hall, but in the individual neighborhoods. It is hoped that we will be able to do this more often and in all parts of the City. The Mayor's Advisory Council, comprised of citizens from all walks of life, was formed to give advice and guidance in how to create a better community. They did a very commendable job on their first undertaking, that of preparing the guidelines for priorities in the Model Cities Proposal.

The Mayor's office has adopted an open door policy where any citizen can walk in and be heard. In addition, as previously mentioned in this column, inquiries and complaints by phone or mail are encouraged and promptly attended to so that citizens can find out what they want to know quickly.

For those citizens who want more direct involvement, each year positions on some of the following Boards and Commissions are appointed: Board of Health, Planning and Zoning Commission, Board of Utilities, Board of Governors of Berger Hospital, Civil Service Commission and the Park Commission. These Boards and Commissions function because interested and concerned citizens have been, and I trust will in the future, donate their time and effort in making Circleville a better place to live.

It is your Mayor's sincere belief that although the Mayor's job is part in description, that a good job requires full time concern for the people's needs, and broad citizen participation and for both to be available everyday. It is because of this belief, that I will give the State of the City Address, entitled "Community in Action." It will serve to discuss what we are doing now and we hope to do in the future in serving the people of the City.

It is not the answer to all our problems, but it is a beginning.

WILLIAMSPORT NEWS

By Ron Beatty — Phone 986-2581

Summer skool is in full swing at Westfall. If anyone wants help with their homework, feel free to ask. I used to help my daughter until suddenly she didn't ask anymore. I figured that it was because I had told her to solve her own questions. Yesterday I ran across some of her old papers and other that teacher didn't know the answers or I didn't understand the question.

Here was one: Tom has 16 marbles. If he divided his marbles equally between two boys, how many marbles would each boy have? Well, my answer was that since Tom was losing his marbles, he couldn't even add let alone divide.

Another: There are 8 girls dancing. If every two girls are partners, how many partners are there? Girls aren't dummies. Some of those girls are going to be dancing with boys and that's what I put.

If mother had a dozen cookies and she gave each boy three cookies, how many boys received cookies? This one wasn't weird right to start with. If she has got a dozen cookies, they are going to get all of them.

Geography was always my meet, so I don't know why she marked this one wrong. If someone ask you the way to Orient, wouldn't you send them up thru Darbyville and not all the way to China or Japan?

Science. How do you make it rain? We disagreed here too. You don't get in a little airplane and throw stuff out on the clouds. All you do is plan to work in the garden or bail hay.

History is simple. If you want to remember the year of the big Ohio River flood, all you do is subtract the 1913 flood from the 1959 flood and subtract the answer of the difference between the 1959 flood from the 1963 flood from your first answer and you get 1937.

Chemistry is too easy for words. That's why they use things like "Ni" for nickel and "Au" for gold? They try to confuse you to make it difficult but it isn't so hard to comprehend. Chemistry is wonderful and the things you can do with it... you couldn't imagine. For instance if you combine Rhodium (rh), Uranium (u), Barium (ba) and Rubidium (rb), you get rhubarb. Try it sometime.

Spelling is a good subject but I've never had trouble spelling words anyway so I skip this

77 Arrested in Washington Outbreak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor People's Campaign leaders, pleading for nonviolence, managed early this morning to cool off demonstrators angered by the campaign's first serious clashes with police.

Wielding clubs and firing tear gas, police Thursday night arrested 77 demonstrators during tense and angry confrontations.

Several top South Christian Leadership Conference officials, including its president, the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, pleaded at a Resurrection City rally that lasted past midnight for adherence to their nonviolent philosophy.

But none had been on hand during the two most serious incidents, a shouting, shoving contest between police and demonstrators near the Department of Agriculture, and the tear gassing of a crowd after some youngsters threw bottles and sticks at police.

"I am pleading with you to say violence is not the way," Abernathy, president of SCLC told an after-midnight mass meeting in a Resurrection City almost under siege by helmeted, rifle-carrying police.

The violence came just 24 hours after a 50,000-person Solidarity Day crowd prompted Abernathy to promise that civil disobedience would begin in earnest later this week.

The first hints of trouble came when some of an estimated 500 demonstrators at the oft-attacked Department of Agriculture blocked main doorways in midafternoon.

Warned by police that such interference was against the law, they refused to budge and went limp to be hauled away by police.

Then, about 100 demonstrators started to march around the block-long building and got into a shouting shoving match with police, some of whom used their night sticks freely.
